A Trip to the Mighlands-Crops-Scenery-Newburgh, West Point, &c.

Correspondence of The New-York Tribune

AT HOME, August 27, 1841. Mr. Editor: Having for a few days enjoyed the bracing occasion pass without recommending to all those who have me, a similar pleasure. Notwithstanding the cheapness modern travel, but a small proportion of our citizens, probaly, know any thing of the beauties of Nature that may truly would to lie at their very doors.

I took the Osceola, which leaves for Poughkeepsie every gernoon at 4 o'clock, and was conveyed to Corawall Landng in less than four hours, so that we went 'through by dayight,' and were thereby enabled to see every thing of interest

Corswatt Landing would scarcely be noticed in passing up the River. It is situated just at the foot of 'Butter Hill,' is the town of Cernwall, five miles above West Point. The buildings are few, and almost overhung by the hills, which nse two or three hundred feet immediately behind them. A freight and tow-boat runs from this place to New-York price each week, by which is forwarded the Produce of the aghboring country. The Osceola calls on her downward and upward trip every day, a convenience not only for the citizens, but for the many people from New-York who have remporarily taken up their residence in the vicinity.

CANTERBURY is a small village, situated a mile from the landing. It contains three or four churches, several stores, suck-shops, &c. The houses are mostly painted white, which gives them a neat and pleasant appearance.

The Crops are pretty much is, except Buckwheat, Corn and Potatoes; the former and latter are now suffering much for want of rain: a few copious showers would relieve the manety of the Farmers and insure fair crops of these pros. Some of the Farmers have large apiaries, but I was sorry to learn that they still resort to the cruel practic willing the bees to obtain their honey. They are not disappainted with the newly invented hives for securing the without destroying the begs, for several varieties are hase among them; but, owing to insufficient trial or some the drive over the road from Canterbury to Nawburgh is one of the pleasantest imaginable; passing as you do along the edge of the River, a fine view of which is obtained, as well as of the town of FISHKILL, on the East shore, and finad Sachem, or Fishkill Beacon, whose altitude is about 1700 feet above tide-water, being the highest peak of the

I newburgh is located upon the side of a very steep bank, but is splace of considerable lusiness and is steadily growing. Much the pleasantest part of the village is upon the brow of the hill, where are the residences of many of the more wealthy took a stroll with a few friends to the grounds of Mr. Downing, the author, I believe, of the new work upon Gardening, so favorably noticed by the Press. His gardens have as Eastern'slope, and are laid out with great taste and skill.

Many of the plants with which they are filled are rare, or at assi were new varieties to file. His house is of the order of schitecture in use during the Elizabethan age; it is covered with a composition, and made to resemble a light variegated stone. Situated in the midst of such a display of lexuriance, and commanding a delightful view of the Hudson gates forthwith, to meet with the delegation on Tuesday Evening and the surrounding country, one is ready to believe it a little next, at Warres Hall, at a o clock, Paradise on earth.

The aftermoon of another day, with a party of friends, I took a little skill for West Point, and we were gently wafted over the dark waters of this compressed portion of the River, at the very foot of the mountains, which rise almost perpenularly 1500 feet. The scenery in this narrow part of the Hudson is much better appreciated by passing stowly in a man hoat than when going at the rapid rate our steambeats are accustomed to move. Landing at West Point, we first wended our way to FORT PUTNAM, situated on a high eminence a short distance from the Point, the ascent to which is somewhat wearisome, though not difficult, and one is more than singly repaid for his toil by the panoramic view which presents itself on reaching the Fort. The noble River far below is seen winding around among the hills, studded with mony a white sail pursuing its easy way over the mirror-like surface. On the opposite side of the River the land is in some parts comparatively level, in others it lies in leautiful | rail purchases, slopes, and others again present the rugged mountains. ACCOUNT BOOKS ruled to any p. Back of the Fort is a deep chasm or ravine, extending to the best materials and in superior style. River, down which you look upon the waving tops of the cool air that seems continually rising from it.

In front, toward the East, the Public Buildings and Parade-Grounds are spread out before the beholder, and, when the caders are manouvering, present not the least pleasing pictures this clovated position affords. The Fort is much dilapidated, the work of human hands and Time combined. The expense of its construction must have been very considerable, the walls being high and massive; it will not probably again be brought into use, but, in case it should be und be well furnished, it would present a strong 'tower of defence,' to the passage of the tiver.

Saveral buildings of stone have been recently erected on the Point for the convenience of the School. The new Academy building, erected in place of the one burned a few years since, is a chaste and durable structure. Three buildings of the same material, now occupied as work-shops, &c. have also been lately completed; they can readily be litted for any pur-pose that may be necessary. They are connected in front by heavy stone wall, which is continued in the rear of the | and the buildings, and surmounted with towers at the corners; it is perced with port-holes on the side toward the River, and is capable of making a very good defence.

I would willingly give utterance to thoughts that rush upon the roled, of scenes of which this classic spot has been the theatre; but the too great length of this letter forbids it.

After seeing the Cadets drill a while, some on horses and others on foot, we sought our boat and were soon on our way to Casterbury. The return trip was enlivened with songs, for which we were principally indebted to the ladies, whose

In this manner was spent a brief but interesting visit among the Highlands, freed from the cares of business,—to which, however, I have now returned, with renewed gnergies.

TEMPERANCE, ART AND IMPROVEMENT. - A philanthropic citizen, who has devoted much time and thought to the imfollowing suggestions to the public through the medium of through the medium of this paper:

Mr. Editor: I have a proposition to make to the Members of Temperance Societies and the friends of the Cause generally. I will premise, however, that it suggested itself to my mind after having surveyed the elegant and ample provision made by the City Temperance Society for the propa-gation of its doctrines and the permanency of its existence. As it is contended by all that as men shall wean themselves from habits of intemperance they will improve their taste, increase their means and feel new desires, it is obvious that the means of gratification should be sought for, and, as far as possible, rendered subservient to their use. Health of body and elevation of mind are essential requisites to our rising acquaintance with Literature and the Arts, and as Temperance leads shown us a novel and simple Life-Preserver bought by him to both desirable states, I wish to place, if the thing be passi-

Society, believing that they will mutually aid each other. My proposition, then, is this:-Let those of the Tempe-Society who have the means and are disposed to ail on in a minute, and is not destroyed by knocks or piercing two important objects, at once create a fund, say ten or twenty from floating timber; in fact, it is a protection against such thousand dollars, to be divided into Stock; let a sufficient casualties. It strikes us as an excellent invention, and one supply of artists' materials of all kinds, including library, engravings, &c. be purchased and sold to artists on the followworks of the artists; the galleries are to be for exhibition value of his works sent to the gallery. Capital by this plan will run no risk, and the artist will be relieved from the great difficulties which at present beset him in relation to the disposal of his works, access to a complete library, and even the procurement of his material. It will be readily granted air and delightful scenery of the Highlands, I cannot let the by all acquainted with the sorrows of artists, that every formidable obstacle lies in the read to 'that mount where Fame's proud temple shines afar.' As I intend to offer reasons in support of this view of diffusing a more general knowledge of the Arts, I shall merely observe that, under the patronage of the Temperance Society of this City, not a vessel need go to a foreign country without a competent artist to bring home transcripts of Nature and Art; that not a single majestic oak in our forest might 'wave its huge fantastic branches high in air,' or 'wear its green coronal of leaves with which God's hand hath graced it; ' nor crag, or dell, or gorgeou landscape stretching away into a world almost unknown far is the region of the sunny West, whose similitude might not adorn the Halls of Temperance, encourage the Arts, and be a blessing to our common Country.

FROM TAMPICO.-The schooner Doric arrived on the 19th from Tampico at New-Orleans, bringing above $50,000 in specie and news to the 16th. The American schooner Tippecanoe, Capt. Tilden, on arriving at the Bar on the 30th of July, was seized by the Custom-House officers and declared to be confiscated, for attempting to smuggle sperm. candles, cotton and other goods. The whole proceeding was hasty and violent. The Captain protested against it, but his arguments were of no avail. The only complaint was, that a por tion of the candles lacked the Consular certificate, although they were duly entered on the manifest and clearance. The affair will doubtless undergo a strict investigation.

Business and affairs generally were exceedingly dull at Tampico. There was some talk of an invasion of Texas by Bustamente, who had issued a decree for a toan of $1,500,000 for the purpose of carrying on hostilities. It is stated in the papers that Santa Ana was making vigorous preparations to quell the revolution in Tobasco. The duty of 15 per cent. will probably be reduced by the Mexican Congress.

IT State Prison Monopoly .- At an acjourned meeting of Delegates held at Warren Hall, on Tuesday Evening, August 17th 1841, for the purpose of receiving Delegates to attend the State Convention at Albany on the lat of September next, after the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, a delegation from the Master Ston-Catters was received and accepted by the meeting; also, an addi-On motion of John Commerford, a Carresponding Committee of Three was appointed, as follows.
